Pelhers united his annot and looked down to the earth, closing his even to surrounding objects. Mr. Isaacs quickly united the noases with the suspended cropes, and then pulled the black caps over the faces of the culprits. The man with his hatchet was inside in readiness for the signal to out, the spectalors were watching every mosement with breakless attention, the culprits were standing motionless beneath the gallows. Another instant and the signal was given; the rope was cut, the heavy weight fell, and Pelifoer and Gonzales jersed up in the air some five feet without a groun or a struggle. Gonzales hands were clasped; Pelihoer's burn motionless by his side. This was at precisely iwenty-four minutes past ten o'clock.

A few seconds more and slight convulsive motions were visible in both bodies, stronger with Pellicer than with Gonzales. The boson of the istier heaved, and his hands algultly twithed. Pellicer's legs were drawn up by the muscuitar contraction, and his arms raised to a pointion at right angles with his body. This action lasted only for a few seconds, and both bodies became perfectly still and motionless spain. For the next fire minutes nothing unusual occurred, and the spectators, having witnessed the worst, began to recover the use of their longues and to whisper remarks to each other.

At half-past ten, six minutes after the jerk, five physicians—Dre. George Gothrane, Alexander Cochrane, Daviel Ayres, Tucker and Gilfirman—approached the bodies and examined the pulsation. The beating of the arterial disculation was quite strong in both, reaching one bundred and twenty pulsations per minute. For the next five minutes the beating gradually became less and less, until finally if reached zero. Life cessed, according to the reactical authorities, at thirty five minutes past ten o'clock, or eleven minutes from the insects. The codinas we

Rigid Examination of Witnesses by Coroner Lowis at Astoria. The Case Without Doubt a Murder-Detectives on the Track of the witnesses in reference to the recent supposed mys-terious murder of the man who was found dead in Wal-men and a hat on.

Several other witnesses were commined, but their featimony disclosed no new facts and meanly corroborated the circumstances as given above.

It is druly believes that the deceased came to his death by a murderons assault at the hands of some unknown person. The ordinion prevails that the party who exhibited the pistol and who had the bloods on his wrist-band is connected with the crime.

The further examination of witnesses was postpened until Thursday evening next, at seven o'clock.
